

Boston peace rally in honor of Taylor

Thursday, August 31, 2006

The family of Herman Taylor III and a growing network of concerned citizens is organizing its first march and rally to bring awareness, peace and healing to neighborhoods impacted by violence in Greater Boston.

Taylor was a Belmont High School student through the School Choice program. On July 12, the 18-year-old became Boston's 37th victim of gun violence this year.

The march and rally will be held on Monday, Sept. 11. At 5 p.m. the Peace Rally will begin at Freedom House, 14 Crawford St., Dorchester. The peace march will begin at 6 p.m.

On the fifth anniversary of Sept. 11, 2001, the HT3 Peace Network invites parents, students, teachers, and other concerned people of all ages, to walk with civic, community and business leaders from various communities to pay tribute to those who lost their lives at Ground Zero, honor soldiers and pray for peace on foreign shores, send a message about the critical need for peace and solidarity in communities terrorized by violence on America's streets, and encourage support for all the families who have lost loved ones to violence.
